We would not only keep away from murderers, thieves, and scoundrels; we would also keep away from ill-disposed neighbors and relatives, because the only way to live in security is to be surrounded by people who love you. You will not find that sort of security with a cosmopolitan public, for it only provides security for itself. Yes, we want to have good neighbours, not bad ones. In fact, we should go much further than having good neighbours. We should see to it that there is a loveable, loyal, honest, and honorable people all around us: our children, our servants, our animals, our servants, our vassals, the husbandmen, the winegrowers, and the clergymen, that there are men and women who will obey us, to do what we will, and who will behave as we want them to behave. You will not find that sort of security with a cosmopolitan public. We want our personal safety and security to be protected from a cosmopolitan public, not from a national, or provincial, or territorial public. For this reason we see that it is better to have one's personal safety and security surrounded and protected by local governments, by governments of provinces, states, and nations, than by a cosmopolitan public; better to be

The Interior Ministry on Wednesday announced the formation of an immediate security committee within the compound of the Prime Minister's Office to examine the security of the prime minister and his staff. The immediate security committee would comprise eight of the ministry's top officials, including the deputy head of the ministry and the head of the National Crisis Management Center. In a statement, the ministry said that the committee would be meeting daily and will report on the security situation of the prime minister's office, in order to prepare for any further events or security risks. The announcement came a day after a group of journalists published a photo and video of a man who they said assaulted Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's driver in front of the prime minister's office in Tokyo's Edogawa Ward. Prime Minister Shinzo Abe walks out of his office on May 5. | AP The man, believed to be a Shin-Abe supporter, attacked the driver after getting into an altercation with a group of media that tried to enter the restricted area. After the attack, the man covered his face with a bandana 2d92ce491b
