possible to set -fPIC on GCC and how to keep it when compiling from source? GCC can set the option -fPIC automatically when compiling with -O3. But I am using -O2 and I have to pass -fPIC manually. Is it possible to let GCC set the option automatically when compiling with -O2? If not, is there any other alternative for me to compile my program with -fPIC? A: You have to set the -fPIC at the source level, as it is part of the C compiler's dialect. It is also, as you already know, set by -O3. I'm not aware of a way to force -fPIC with -O2, but if you have to compile your program with -O2 then simply always compile with -O2. Ask HN: What is a good HN alternative in Germany? - s_hayamov

There are good / alternative HN sites in other countries, but not in Germany. I'm looking for a similar site with good up-to-date content, nice and clean design, etc. As an example I'm using Aktive instead of Reddit in Germany. Aktive has many good articles, but there are not many articles from the last month in Aktive compared to Reddit. Reddit is much more interesting, because you can get the current news with 10k-100k followers.
