Since its inception in 1932, the Danish Committee for Arabic Studies () has released over 1300 volumes of over 3600 entries. Nearly half of this material relates to Egypt and Sudan. Some of the more recent volumes have been published in English as Arabic Lexicography, edited by T. Ibn Ibran, 5 vols. The first volume deals with the history and general features of Arabic lexicography, while the following four contain dictionaries of individual languages and dialects, arranged according to similarities in vocabulary. The translations from the Lexicography into English, based on the standardised Arabic terms, are by various scholars including N.I.A. Gamal (1971), H.C.Inda (1979), H.W. Turner (1973) and P.S.A.P.P. (1978, rev. ed. 1980, 1984). The latter of the latter two volumes has, in addition, a section on etymology and antiquities, with (revised) translations into English by the editor. The Monthly Journal of the Department of is also an important source. The Arabic Department of the University of Chicago has since 1941 published the Bulletin of the department, incorporating its former Language and Literature Bulletin, with the latter element now generally titled.
