ongoing series of portraits of women who live in the suburbs, delving into the yearning we all experience, from young and heart-pounding to not-so-young and toothless and childless. Drawing on the themes of breakdown, longing and redemption, Desire explores the complexities of the suburban landscape in ways both visual and narrative. "There is a strange and repulsive thing within us that says every afternoon, every evening, 'My life is incomplete without hope.

Without hope, my life is incomplete.' Desire is a series of portraits of hope, with an attempt to penetrate the layers of the suburban landscape. These portraits are a desperate attempt to make sense of the way we are living out our lives. How is it that we can be content to live out our days, only to be haunted by the reality of our mortality. The reconstructed images deal with the place where we have chosen to live. We have no place in these landscapes, yet we are still present, there, going nowhere, doing
