What's New In?

What's the best web bookmarking app for your Android? I use Pocket and it's awesome, but with the way the Pocket web app works, it's always throwing out a bunch of errors so I've started looking for alternatives. Webify is supposed to be a solid option and it's doing okay, except it doesn't have Pocket support. There's also Google Keep which is kind of okay but I don't like the UI. What do you use on your Android? Let's say that you'd like to be able to record your voice as you're doing various mundane things around the house, such as cooking or washing dishes, and that you want your voice to be recorded directly into a separate file, without having to record each segment separately in the same recording program and then merging them together later. How can we do that on the Mac or PC? It seems to me that every time I've tried this, I've ended up recording something in Audacity, recording something in another program, and then having to merge them all together in Audacity to finalize the recording of the file. As far as I can tell, Audacity can't send files directly to a program like GarageBand, as a standalone program. I'd love to hear some suggestions or at least be able to point me in the right direction on what software I could use. A: If you're using Windows 7 or newer, you should be able to use Audacity (free audio editor) and RecordMyScreen (free screen capture software) to generate the videos. The short version: Download RecordMyScreen here: Download Audacity here: Now you can start recording by launching RecordMyScreen and opening Audacity. Audacity In Audacity, under the "File" menu, select "Screen Shot as Webm" That should open a screen saver window that says "audacity recording" Record My Screen Under RecordMyScreen, double click on "RecordScreen Capture" to start recording When that's complete, click on "stop" and that will save the video to your desktop. Now it's time to upload the video to YouTube! To do this, in YouTube, select the YouTube icon at
