Bubble Bobble is a classic arcade game available on many platforms.Q: Predicate Logic Cube, Creating a Truth Table for a Given True

Sentence I am not sure whether my brain can handle this. I have used the create truth table from I have been trying to find a way of creating a truth table using my own proof, but I just can't get my head around it. For the sentence " $x=y, z=z, x=y, z=y$ ", the cube shows " $y=y$ ". It's like the rules have changed and now only certain kinds of predicates are allowed, and all the columns have to match. However, it didn't work for my sentence above. The cube stated " $y=y$ " as a conclusion, even though  $y=y$  is not a valid sentence in predicate logic. Does anyone have any suggestions? What I had in mind was to create some sentence C, such as " $x$  or  $z=y$ " and use the following as my premise, also considering the cube only accepts one sentence per truth table at the moment: For all x and all y, if x is true, then z is true. and then just looking at the cube for " $x$  or  $z=y$ ", I was able to actually work out how to add a new column to the truth table for either x or z. The issue I am having is how can I work this out for an if sentence, such as " $x=y$  or  $z=z$ " or " $x=y$  or  $z=y$ ", where z has to be taken as equal to y. A: You might be attempting to prove a version of Venn's Theorem here. It
