Well there is no doubt that technology continues to advance at a rapid pace, but does it really still need to? While people can, and do, get creative with the various forms of technology available to them, many are simply amazed at what they can create with a little help. Everything from tiny little devices that can be suspended from a ceiling or the top of a table, to teddy bears that have been given the ability to speak. Some of these gadgets are slightly more useful than others, but they are a little too cute to play the most common role, toys. Of course, what are teddy bears, but cute little dolls? They are, we admit, cute, but in many ways there is little actual difference between them and many of the other products we have seen. The reason that there are so many teddy bear and similar gadgets is that so many people can see the potential in what little devices they can incorporate into toys. Imagine, for example, a stuffed monkey that you could connect to your computer. It could be programmed to do things on your behalf, or you could easily connect it with other things around you and make it act as a remote control for your computer, camera or other device. What if your teddy bear could not only be your computer but was programmed to be the perfect assistant, always by your side? Not all of the new gadgets are meant to serve as toys, some have more practical purposes than others. One of the most amazing gadgets to come to the market is the Mimo baby monitor. Created by the same folks who made Mimo Bluetooth Mics, this gadget combines a camera with a free app that is available for any operating system, specifically a smartphone or tablet. The technology is small enough to not be a nuisance to everyday use but powerful enough to allow for a reliable picture that will not be lost. If you are looking for a gadget that will allow you to monitor your children in a way that they will never be able to hide from you, we recommend checking out Mimo. There is, however, one particular gadget that can be defined as the ultimate toy. The frisky teddy bear
