Indeed, if h_i eq 0$, then from it follows that ${\omega}_i(d_i) > 0$, and then it follows from that there exists a Lagrangian $L \in [{\mathcal}L]_{\epsilon_i(d_i)}$ such that $L_({\partial}_i h_i) = 1$. \{alternative proof\} Without assuming that $(M,{\langle \cdot, \cdot \rangle})$ is nondegenerate, we can use the partial lifting ${\varphi}_i$ to prove Proposition \{main\}. Indeed, starting with two lifts ${\varphi}_i$ and ${\varphi}_j$ of the same vector field X, we can construct a further lift ${\varphi}_i$ that agrees with ${\varphi}_i$ on the complement of the range of ${\varphi}_j$. We then have $d_M ({\varphi}^{\omega}_j - {\varphi}^{\omega}_i) = {\varphi}^(d_M {\omega}_j) - {\varphi}^(d_M {\omega}_i) = 0$, and thus ${\varphi}^{\omega}_j - {\varphi}^{\omega}_i$ is constant. Since the pullbacks of ${\omega}_i$ and ${\omega}_j$ to the complement of the range of ${\varphi}_j$ are the same, Lemma \{delicate\} implies that ${\varphi}^{\omega}_j - {\varphi}^{\omega}_i = 0$. To construct the lift ${\

Read moreThe present invention relates to a roller conveyor useful for movable storage transport cases of the type which have a slotted drawer and the like. Roller conveyors are generally well known in the art. Roller conveyors are typically used to move containers, e.g., tool boxes, of various sizes over smooth floors from one location to another. As is well known to those skilled in the art, there is a need to optimize container movement in order to minimize wasted floor space. It is generally preferable to have a maximum level of capacity with a minimum use of floor space. In this regard, if, for example, the roller conveyor is to be used with a container of relatively large area, then the conveyor must have a relatively long span in order to limit the need for extensive maneuvering of the containers by the user.
