If the notice was received too late, the debt is discharged. Id. In this case, the notice was received more than twenty days after the date of the first scheduled trial setting. Thus, absent a showing of extraordinary circumstances, pursuant to § 523(a)(3)(B), Ms. Diaz' claim that her debt was discharged would be waived and she would lose her right to a discharge. With regard to whether Ms. Diaz was aware of the first trial setting, she signed a number of documents, including her complaint. Furthermore, counsel for her husband, filed a motion to withdraw stating that the defendants' counsel had notified him that the plaintiff had failed to appear for trial. In other words, Ms. Diaz' counsel was aware of the first trial setting. Despite this, counsel did not notify the court of a change of address for Ms. Diaz. A review of the record reveals no evidence of extraordinary circumstances, or some neglect or mistake on the part of Ms. Diaz' counsel. Under these circumstances, Ms. Diaz was bound to know that her case was not being heard. At the same time, this Court does not wish to set a precedent which penalizes debtors' attorneys for a failure to learn of a hearing date. Based on the facts in this case, this Court believes that no change in venue or change of counsel should be necessary when a debtor receives a notice for a hearing which is set for a date after the due date for filing any pleadings or other documents. Thus, in the future, this 4bc0debe42
