They will see a team with a vastly improved offense. They will have no defensive starters back. They will face a quarterback that is just as mobile as any of the stars on the field. They will see a team that will score points in multiple ways, unlike the Wildcats who will need to stick to their ground game. No longer will they be in an unfamiliar situation. But, they are favored in every game, so anything less than an upset is expected. This game will put the program back on a track of consistent success, one that fans of this program should be thankful for. While

The concentrate tank includes a plurality of flow-through ion-exchange membranes which convey ionized solids from the EDI unit to the concentrate tank and produce a dilute stream from the concentrate tank. The dilute stream from the concentrate tank is typically passed through one or more deionization units in a regeneration system or a downflow ion exchange unit, which remove ions from the dilute stream. The deionization units may include ion-exchange membranes, which are hydrated, and/or cation-exchange membranes, which are hydrated. The EDI unit is often used to produce substantially purified, deionized water for various applications, including drinking water and industrial process use. Many conventional EDI systems include a source of electrical energy for operating one or more pumps and a controller that is electrically connected to the pumps to control the pumps. The conventional EDI systems often use an alternating current (AC) source of electrical energy, such as a power line, to power the pumps. However, some conventional EDI systems may be powered by a direct current (DC) source of electrical energy, such as a battery or a power source such as
