I know that I can do this: (clojure.pprint/pprint/pr-str my-map) but this is for debugging purpose, not for unit testing. What I need is some kind of function to print a map/dictionary, like (print my-map) or (print my-map {foo 1}) and so on... Is it possible to achieve this? A: In addition to the methods suggested in the previous answer, it is common practice to write tests to check map equality. We can create a map with its components substituted in a single function call. (def test-map {:map1 map2}) And use it for both equality and an mapper: (is= test-map {:foo 1})
