Portal de Vigo The Portal de Vigo (Galician: Ponta do Carvalhal de Vigo), also known as Porta de Vigo (Galician: Porta do Carvalhal de Vigo) is the gateway of the city of Vigo, in the province of Pontevedra, in Galicia, Spain. It has a monumental gate and a huge gatehouse. The original, on two levels, consists of an arcaded portico supported by two-storey buildings of granite. The arcades have five rows of arcades, an underground half-cellar, a guard tower and two rows of small rooms on the first floor. The portal is flanked by two small bell towers. The road is raised to the height of the wall and decorated with a monumental archway. The Old Gate is typical of the 17th century and is built in ashlar limestone. It has a double façade, with a rectangular second floor, rising to the top of the wall. At the end of the 19th century, the Portal was refurbished by the architects Antonio María Pérez de Utrera, Celso Fernández Delclós and Juan María Vadell. The project changed the shape of the faç
