Association between low vitamin D level and obesity in patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus--a cross-sectional analysis. Diabetes mellitus is a well-recognized risk factor for metabolic syndrome and cardiovascular disease. Although a close relation between vitamin D and diabetes is suggested in previous studies, only few relevant clinical studies have been carried out. The aim of our study was to assess whether vitamin D levels were associated with body mass index and waist circumference in patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus. This cross-sectional study included 643 patients with type 2 diabetes. Anthropometric, biochemical and lifestyle parameters were recorded and the circulating 25-hydroxyvitamin D [25(OH)D] levels were measured in all of the patients. The prevalence of patients with vitamin D deficiency was 67.2 % and that of 25(OH)D insufficiency was 75.1 % in this study. The mean serum 25(OH)D level was negatively associated with the percentage of body fat and waist circumference (p
