services is an important quality measure, but it is unclear how many endoscopy centers are eligible. We describe an endoscopic quality assessment program in which automated endoscopic image review was used to determine eligibility of participating centers. This prospective, multicenter, cross-sectional study of consecutive outpatient endoscopy procedures was performed at 14 sites. An automated endoscopic image review device (QAVEX™) was used to evaluate videos of gastrointestinal endoscopy on completion of procedures. Based on a sample of 133 surgeries, the sensitivity, specificity, positive predictive value, and negative predictive value of QA
