What's New In Photoshop 2022?

Q: Structure Map and WCF: How to access the SM Structure instance Structure Map Tutorials and Guides say that you can access the Structure instance by something like this: `var container = (IContainer)Configure.Instance.Container;` However it looks like `Configure.Instance.Container` doesn't contain any trace information like many classes that implement `IMessageSource`, including WCF, do. I assume it means I need to access Structure Mapper and access the instance there. And there are no tutorials about that. How do I do that? A: You don't need to access the StructureMapper directly. You need to create your own StructureMap object which will take in your main container and then configure it with your `Configure.As()` methods. I'll elaborate by giving an example. Say you have an `IConfigurationSection` in your Structure Map config file and a section name of "Blah" like this:
`StructureMap .Initialize(c => c.StructureMapBuilder = new CmsVendorStructureMapBuilder(c));
.Configure(x => x.For().Use(s => s.TypeMappings.Add(a => new VendorList() { ViewAllVendorFields = false,`
