Its carrying capacity must be carefully considered to keep it close to its natural size. It is thought that the reef was originally lower than it is now, but that the sea level was also rising at that time. The stone artefacts found on the islands are dated between approximately 80,000 and 25,000 years old. The earliest occupation sites are dated between 28,000 and 25,000 years old, and are found on Jaba: the Late Stone Age site where the oldest stone tools have been found, date to before 29,000 BC. It has the cleanest water of any of the tropical atolls in the region and is a popular destination
