The authors of this research found that stimulation of the SA node can help people more easily fall asleep. "Both primary and secondary brainstem functions contribute to the process of sleep induction, and neurophysiological changes related to arousal and restoration following sleep are coordinated in the brainstem, and thus, the preBötC plays an important role in arousal processes," the authors write. The effects of sleep deprivation became familiar over the years of the American Civil War, when Union soldiers were forced to endure five days of fighting without sleep, or they would be used up. But the researchers say their research was prompted by news reports that water-boarding, the technique that has been used to interrogate al Qaeda suspects by putting water in a person's mouth until he believes he's drowning, may have been inspired by the "dogmatic" principle of the "French roulette method" for sleep deprivation. The method is credited with saving British prisoners of war during World War II from dying of untreated wounds, and may have been the inspiration for the infamous Abu Ghraib torture facility. The approach includes either a lesion of the nucleus subcoeruleus, with the SA node separated from it, or a lesion of the pre-BötC, with the pre-BötC isolated from the rest of the brain. The researchers plan to investigate the neuromodulatory role of the pre-BötC in patients with Rett syndrome, who've shown sleep disturbances. They also plan to test neurophysiological signatures of sleep/arousal in animals following lesions of the pre-BötC, and investigate whether people experiencing hallucinations have a change in pre-BötC output. Q: How can I use Ajax with Python? I have a web application which uses Python for some backend functionality, and I'd like to create a web page that uses an Ajax request to a Python script. The reason I'd like to do this is because I'd like to remove the need for the user to have the Flash plugin installed. Any ideas on how to get started? A: Fortunately, this question already has an answer here: Python: Ajax requests: do I need to install a server or can I use the included httplib? A: Take a look at the WSGI middleware, and allow for HTTP request/response calls to be passed in using the CGIAdapter. A simple and highly specific method for sensitive detection of CCR5-tropic HIV-1. A human HIV-1 tat-driven luciferase gene reporter system was utilized to test the sensitivity of several different infectious molecular clones of HIV-1. The combination of the tat gene and the CCR5 coreceptor allowed sensitive detection of the replication of a majority of wild-type HIV-1 isolates and a mutant HIV-1 clone with a mutation in the envelope gene that reduced envelope-dependent entry and the entry of the related isolate MN, a CCR5-tropic derivative of HIV-1(NL4-3). The luciferase-driven HIV-1 reporter system detected 10-100 times fewer copies of virus than a quantitative RT-PCR method, which was designed to amplify the relevant region of HIV-1. Moreover, the method could distinguish between envelopes expressing CCR5- and CXCR4-tropic isolates, irrespective of whether the envelope proteins were derived from the same or from different HIV-1 strains. for a broad range of aerobic bacteria.^[@B24],[@B25],[@B37],[@B38]^ Therefore, there is an argument of whether prophylactic use of antibiotics is needed. Although prophylactic antibiotic treatment of infection at risk sites does not decrease operative site infections, it may reduce hospital costs and length of stay.^[@B39]^ The eradication of SA from the body is also beneficial for diabetic patients with poor circulation because the administration of parenteral antibiotics to a patient with bacterial infection is often associated with thrombotic complications. Although the use of antimicrobial agents cannot currently be generalized,
