Q: How to select the string after the string containing a specific number? I'm writing a program to select string after a number. Input : abb/6/ I want to select 6 as output. I tried the following code. s="abb/6/" p=re.search(s,"^d+/") print p It gives the output as abb While the expected output is 6. A: s="abb/6/" s1=re.sub(s,".") print s1 will give the string after '.' A: Using a pure regex could be tricky when your string has more than one matches: import re s = "abb/6/1.txt" s1 = re.sub(r'\d+', "", s) # s1 = "abb" regex = r'(.+)(?=\d+)' # i.e. any character at least one time, followed by a digit at least one time print regex.sub(s, s1) # "6"

The late anthropologist, Manuel de Vicente, said that, in terms of immigration, “Spain has become, more than any other European country, the country of the stranger”, so that an open-door policy that started in the 1950s has come to define the country’s identity. This feeling of being a country open to migrants has been strongly contested by the ex-president of the Partido Popular (PP), the most conservative political party, Mariano Rajoy. His criticism of the current government of Prime Minister, Pedro Sanchez, is not that there is anything in the proposed policies themselves, but that they have been too liberal. Indeed, his sacking of the Council of the Regions, Spain's autonomous regions, on 9th September has been interpreted as a way of making them produce a budget that opposes the so-called pro-immigration policy of the new government. But it is not only the regional parties who feel threatened by the new policy. Spain's powerful
