Laser Abrasion Grafting of the Ti - Base Metal Junction of Tissue-Engineered Heart Valves: Development and Characterization of Standardized Protocols. The application of laser microabrasion to the Ti-base metal junction of tissue-engineered heart valves (TEHVs) has provided a means to simplify the micromachining process. The goal of this study was to develop standardized techniques that facilitate better quality control and consistent, reproducible abrasion of the valve components. Laser abrasion was performed on 17 Triton-fabricated TEHVs to create a smooth Ti-base metal interface. Two different methods of laser abrasion were studied: 1) laser microabrasion of a model TEHV with a neural torch and 2) abrasion of the tissue-engineered heart valve itself, without producing an artificial surface of TEHVs. Results showed that microstructural analysis revealed that for the model TEHV, ~25.5% of the Ti-base metal gap was ablated, while for the tissue-engineered heart valves, ~14.6% of the Ti-base metal gap was ablated. Development of a new protocol for laser abrasion of both the model and tissue-engineered heart valves yielded ~11.3% of the Ti-base metal junction removed. These results indicate that the new laser abrasion protocol provides for satisfactory ablation of the porous tissue-engineered heart valve and sufficiently smooth interface between the Ti and base metal for TEHVs. The laser abrasion protocol can be applied to Triton tissue-engineered heart valves (TEHVs) and the Ti-base metal junction of Triton-fabricated TEHVs.

Tax on Transgender Is Opposed by 2.5 Million People in the US

Transgender Americans are again outraged by a proposed tax from the Republican-controlled U.S. House of Representatives to deny them credit and special benefits over the course of their lives. More than two million people have signed an open letter in support of the House bill to reverse proposed regulations from the Obama administration that gave transgender people equal access to accommodations and other benefits in federal workplaces. The bill (H.R. 758), introduced by House Republicans, repeals an executive order in 2015 that directed the Labor Department to treat gender identity as a protected class under the Americans with Disabilities Act. A proposed new law would require federal agencies to fire
