Photoshop started life in 1987 as an image editing program by the name of Paint Shop Pro. It was born as part of a series of four products released by Adobe, all of which were related to graphics and photography. Photoshop was part of the Creative Suite of products designed to work together. What Is Photoshop? Typically, Photoshop is the graphics part of the Creative Suite, also known as the photography bundle. Like most other packages, Photoshop enables photographers to retouch and edit their images. Photoshop is often used for the transfer of images from film to computers, but it is also a powerful tool for editing raster images. These raster images include printed photographs, web graphics, and scanned documents. Photoshop is integrated into the Creative Suite because editing is such an essential part of image-creation process. Photoshop is a raster image-editing application, meaning that the output image is a bitmap image. This bitmap file can be saved in common formats such as GIF, JPEG, TIFF, or PDF. It can then be inserted into a layout or be included in a web page. Photoshop is also a powerful tool for non-photographers, which is partly why it was also added to the Creative Suite. It is a multipurpose image-editing program that can be used for other types of graphics, including web graphics and logos. For a free copy, check out the download bundle from MacUpdate.com, or head to Adobes' website. What Is Photoshop's History? Many people are surprised to learn that Photoshop has a truly remarkable history. It has been through many changes and versions. It was originally conceived as a bitmap editor, meaning that it could transform a photo into a wide range of different file types. It now turns out that Photoshop really started as a picture editor for printers. This is how it changed into a powerful workhorse for editing raster images, and it became a permanent part of the Creative Suite. It also became the market-leader, surpassing Corel Photo-Paint as the most popular photo-editing program. It is worth noting that Corel Photo-Paint is now available as a free download from the company's site. It is primarily a bitmap editor that can be used for many purposes, including picture editing. Nevertheless, Photoshop is still the foremost graphics and image-editing application, and it's one of the most

Local Food Project to Hand Out 10,000 Pounds of Free Produce Traditionally, fruits and vegetables are deemed to be luxury items, something that you should always have in the refrigerator and can enjoy on a daily basis. However, the reality is that fruits and vegetables are one of the most important parts of a healthy diet. "The things we put in our bodies, whether it's good or bad, really affect our well-being. So we encourage people to add fruits and vegetables into their diets regularly," said Anna Janz, a founding member of FoodShare Project SA, a volunteer-based food sharing project in the Oswego and Ontario regions. For the past three weeks, Janz and her FoodShare Project colleagues have been working with Oswego-area residents, helping them to get in touch with local growers and finding ways to distribute the fresh fruits and vegetables. This past week marked the culmination of the three-week effort, which included organizing a food drive, distribution of surplus produce, and the distribution of door hangers inviting people to come and pick up their share of fresh produce. FoodShare Project SA was able to bring in a total of 7,540 pounds of food, including 2,818 pounds of fresh produce, 3,513 pounds of canned goods, 939 pounds of dry pasta and beans, and 981 pounds of dry cereal. It's estimated that the FoodShare Project distributed 110,000 pounds of food in the three weeks. All of this fresh produce is currently in the process of being donated to local food pantries, retirement communities and homeless shelters. "I feel like the FoodShare Project has really made a huge impact in the community. For example, I was in the Oswego City Hall today, and I found out that there was a small community garden there," said Janz. "And last week at the Oswego Farmers' Market, I met an older lady, and she told me that the FoodShare Project came to her home and she has been picking fresh fruits and veggies ever since. It's just really gratifying to be able to bring good food to people." To mark the end of the FoodShare Project, FoodShare Project SA is inviting residents to come and pick up their shares of fresh produce at the Central Square Food Bank on Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.
