Q: How to Create.net 3.5 Forms Application and deploy it on my server in visual studio I need to create an application in .Net 3.5. I've created a visual studio 2010 project for that. I have a .Net Framework 3.5 installed on my computer. But when I start the application I'm getting an error : The target framework of this project is .NET Framework 2.0. The current framework is version 3.5. This mismatch requires that Visual Studio automatically convert the project to target the .NET 2.0 framework. How can I do that please? Thanks in advance

A: You will need to either create a new one. Or update the target framework to 2.0. Your old project will have to be updated (either by altering the Target framework, or by changing the files) to use the newer framework. If the project isn't using any of the Visual Studio-specific templates or features, you can go to the project properties and click the 'target' tab to set the target framework. If it is a Web or Windows Desktop project, you can right click it and click 'Unload Project' then click 'Edit Project File' and edit the 'TargetFramework' section. If it is a Console Application, either use the 'Console Application' template to create a new project, or add the following to your project file (usually in the main program class). 2.0.50727

If the TargetFramework is set to 2.0 or higher, the above code will ensure that this project is set to 2.0. Q: sending and receiving images from client to server I'm currently writing a simple image(png) viewer. I'm using SQLite as the database. I was thinking of sending the image over the network to the server and storing it in a BLOB. At the server, I would store the image blob into the database and then request the image from the database for display. Is this a correct solution? I want to minimize data sent over the wire. A: A simple way to handle this is to have the server process the image, then send the server a URL on the client that contains the path for the image. The client can then free lubricant for chain. If you drive a lot, add more lubricant. If you don't, don't worry about it. If you have seen the nearest fire station lately, feel free to offer them some. For a very long time, a standard chain is a two link chain. The actual two links are placed and tensioned in a link plate. Lubricant is applied to the chain and after the installation, the link plate is closed. The next morning, the chain stretches due to temperature and pressure differences. Normally, this is a good thing for safety. In some cases, however, chain is stretched past its limit and snaps. The "normal" installation process described above helps prevent this from happening. If, however, a problem develops, consult your mechanic. The 50th anniversary edition of the 5-Speed Free-Flyer is going to be the ultimate 50th anniversary edition of the bicycle. And one of its best features is a special chain that is guaranteed not to break and give you decades of service. The chain has new "Linkplates" to minimize chain stretching and movement of the chain. The “Linkplates” have also been re-designed to minimize chain stretching and to maximize chains life. WHY THE FIFTY YEARS FREE-FLY CHAIN? The Fifty Years Free-Flyer is a very close copy of the original NOSB 50 Years Free-Flyer bicycle. We have been using the original design for many years. We are now taking the design and making it better. The 50 Years Free Flyer is completely re-designed and built using new “Linkplates” made entirely of a special, S-link, material. These “Linkplates” will minimize chain movement and chatter. It will also increase the longevity of the chain. Using an S-link material also means that they can be produced in quantity and with consistent quality. WHY AM I GETTING THE SPECIAL CHAIN? We have been building a bike that will be close to the original bike, but will have new S-link chain “Linkplates”. We wanted to give the customer the ability to guarantee the chain would not break. To achieve this we took
